»My father once told me that my world is like a black and white image, but I guess my heart has found its own colors.«

Photographer Anni Hanén began her Just Small Hiccups story after she moved back to her childhood home with her own family. She photographed the feelings that arose in the house full of memories, with its garden and the nearby forest. This photographic story is a poem, made from a deeply personal point of view, however portraying the universal feelings to understand life. With the pictures and texts, it addresses growing up, how we see ourselves and each other in a family.

Anni Hanén (b. 1981) lives and works in Helsinki, Finland. The reflections of her own childhood combined with her child's view create a visual dialog between mother and son, past and present. This language they create together expresses emotions, remembrance and memories. She has participated in solo and group exhibitions since 2004 and has received various grants.
