Sensitive documentation about a unique summer camp for gender-creative children

You Are You documents an annual weekend summer camp for gender nonconforming children and their families. This camp offers a temporary safe haven where children can freely express their interpretations of gender alongside their parents and siblings without feeling the need to look over their shoulders. Through these images the viewer will experience an important moment in history where the first gender variant childhood is being openly expressed with the support of friends and family. Morris reaches beyond the confines of the camp to contribute to a dialog about the crucial role that support plays in the lives of gender unique children.

Lindsay Morris' work has been published in the New York Times Magazine (cover story), TIME Magazine, GEO Germany and GEO International, among others.

Jennifer Finney Boylan (born James Boylan) is an American author, political activist, and professor of English. She is a trans woman. Her 2003 autobiography, She's not There: A Life in Two Genders, was the first book by a transgender American to become a bestseller.

Victoria Redel

»These are just photographs of children. The children may look different from most others; they might cause one to wonder "what" they are and how they might be classified; they might be an affront to those who would force people to play by preset rules. But when we look closer – at our own lenses and then at the photos themselves – we see that the true worth of these photographs is the undeniable demonstration that the children portrayed here are like every other child on earth: playful, beautiful, contemplative, strong.«
